He Urges a 'High Sense of Honor'

By Robert B. Semple Jr. WEST POINT, N.Y., May 30 (NYT).-President Nixon urged the 3.700 cadets at the U.S. Military Academy yesterday to preserve a "high aense of honor" in their profession despite mounting assaults on military traditions from within the ranks and without.

"The emotional anti-militarism and moral upheaval of our times will test you severely," Mr. Nixon told the corps of cadets.

"It is no secret that the discipline' integrity, patriotism and self-sacrifice, which are the very life blood of an effective armed force and which the corps represents, can no longer be taken for granted in the Army in which you will serve.

"The symptoms of trouble are plain enough—from drug abuse to insubordination [but] I believe, in perspective, that the military ethic remains strong in the hearts of America's fighting men. Your special task will be to reaffirm it, and to give it new life and meaning for the difficult times ahead."

An Earlier Address

Mr. Nixon's address to the cadets, arrayed in formation on the academy's manicured parade ground, was his second to a mili-tary institution since his inauguration. Spanish trawler picked up North Atlantic Treaty Organization electronic equipment in the Atlantic earlier this month, the Defense Ministry said tonight.

A spokesman said the shots were fired well clear of the trawler, Maria Victoria Moyana, which entered an area off the southwest coast of Ireland during an air-sea exercise on May 20.

The trawler picked up the equipment, which the spokesman said was not highly classified material. It is believed the electronic devices were sonar buoys. A miniatry statement said a patrolling Shackleton- aircraft spotted the trawler and radioed the submarine, the Otus, to surface.

The master of the Otus, Lt. Comdr. Barry Carr, used a bull horn to request the return of the equipment, but he received no reply. He then fired a few shots from a light machine gun well clear of the vessel to "attract its attention." The trawler ignored the shots and sailed away.

The spokesman said the Maria Victoria Moyana has since landed the electronic equipment at La Coruma, Spain, and discu sions are under way with Spanish authorities for its return.

Englishwoman Gives Birth After 13-Month Pregnancy

LONDON, May 30 (Reuters) .- A 7-pound 7-ounce baby girl is believed to have made world medical history because ber mother. Mrs. Christine Houghton, was pregnant for 13 months before the birth.

The baby, Tina, was born by induced birth at a hospital last week in the southern English town of Rustington after a pregnancy lasting 381 days.

The Guinness Book of Records, one of Britain's standard authorities on world records, says that a 25-year-old woman in Woking, southern Engalnd, gave birth to a baby after a 389-day pregnancy in 1954. But the child was stillborn.

Tins and her mother were both "doing well" and leftthe hospital yesterday. The gynecologist who attended Mrs. Houghton, Lynn Evans, said yesterday that he had thought "a 13-month baby was impossible."

The doctor added that he believed Tina to he a case of arrested birth. Mrs. Houghton showed signs of having a miscarriage after four months of pregnancy, but nothing happened. The doctor believes the baby went into a form of "fetal hibernation."

"All the time we knew the baby was alive because we listened to ber heartbeat. Then she suddenly started to grow again " he said

The father said his wife "got fed up. She tried jumping up and down to make things happen. But nothing didy" and the hirth was induced.

Although the "harvest-time of peace" has not yet arrived, Mr. Nixon said, the seeds of world unity have been sown. ABM Mission Changed

From various scientific groups opposed to an anti-ballistic missile system, the objection is now being raised that the warhead was originally designed for an ABM system that was supposed to provide an area defense for the United States against a small sttack, such as might be launched by China. But now that the mission of the Safeguard system has been changed to providing terminal defense for the Minnte man missile bases, they argue that such a large warhead is no

To contain the radioactivity from the unusually large underground explosion, the warhead will be detonated at the bottom of a 6.000-foot well that has been drilled through rock on the isoleted Aleutian island.

$160 Million Spent

AEC spokesman said that the test is estimated to cost $190 million and of that amount $160 million has already been spent.

Much of the cost of the test, code-named Canniltin, has resulted from the difficult engineering task of drilling a hole-120 inches in diameter at the top and then 54 inches in diameter in the lower part-through 6,000 feet of volcanic rock. Also included in the cost was a one-megaton "cali-bration shot," conducted on the island in October, 1959, to test the effects of a large underground explosion, as well as extensive environmental studies.

Hospital Costs In U.S. Rise to $81 A Day Per Patient

CHICAGO, May 30 (AP).--Hospital costs in the United States rose to $81 a day per patient in 1970-up 15.7 percent over 1969, the American Hospital Association reported Friday.

Total expenses for the 5,859 community hospitals registered with the AHA reached $19.6 billion, up from $16.6 billion.

Dr. Edwin L. Cosby, executive president of AHA, said, "The inflationary spiral of the nation's economy has played a large part in the rise of hospital costs. Everything bospitals buy costs more than it did a year ago. And saleries continue to increase."

Payrolls accounted for $11.4 billion of the community hospitals' expenses in 1970, a rise of 16.4 percent over $9.8 billion in 1968. The AHA has a hospital registration of 7.123, which employed 2,537,000 persons in 1970. Of these, 1,929,000 were employed in community hospitals. That meant 293 employees for every 100 patients-up from 280 per 100 in 1969. A decade ago, it was 226 per 100.

The U.S.S.R. Gains in Egypt

The new 15-year Soviet-Egyptian treaty of friendship and cooperation goes far enough toward cementing the ties between the two states to raise questions whether Egypt may be on the way to becoming another Soviet satellite. Certainly any thought that the U.S.S.R. might soon be dislodged from its Middle Eastern foothold is ended for the time being

The immediately operative section of the treaty is Article 8 on military cooperation, with its explicit provisions for Soviet supply of arms and for Soviet training of Egyptians to use the weapons provided. There is nothing new about this, since these Soviet activities began as long ago as the mid-1950s. But while Nasser ruled, he was able. to get this aid without making a formal, broad and long-range commitment to Moscow such as President Sadat has now signed. Except for religion, it is difficult to think of a major area of Egyptian life which Mr. Sadat has not now promised to bring closely under Moscow's guidance.

Another far-reaching section of this treaty is Article 7, which obligates the two countries to "regularly consult each other at different levels on all important questions affecting the interest of both states" and "to concert their positions" when there is "a danger to peace or violation of peace." Does this mean that Egypt has to support the Soviet Union.

in the event of a Soviet-Chinese war, for example, or to back the U.S.S.R. automatically if Moscow ever gets into a serious dispute with some Arab state other than Egypt?

It is difficult to believe that President Sadat would have signed this treaty unless he were under the most extreme Soviet pressure. When the news first came of the Podgorny trip to Cairo, the Kremlin was clearly disturbed by Mr. Sadat's purge of many of the leading pro-Communist and pro-Soviet figures in his regime. It was a reasonable inference that Mr. Podgorny and his colleagues feared Egypt might turn away from the Soviet Union, as Indonesia once did after receiving a large amount of Soviet help. It is quite possible that Mr. Podgorny threatened severe sanctions if Egypt's president did not bind his country to the Soviet Union as firmly as is done by this treaty.

For the moment Moscow appears to have made a major advance, and to have set the stage for the massive infusion of Soviet institutions, ideas, equipment and personnel into all areas of Egyptian life. However, the Egyptians are a proud, nationalistic people and they will not forever wish to be dominated by the Soviet Union, regardless of the commitments they are willing to make now, under the influence of the passions excited by the conflict with Israel.

Crisis in the Church

A decade after Pope John XXIII summoned the bishops of the Catholic Church to Rome for Vatican Council II, the shock waves of change still shake this ancient institution. Aggiornamento-the church's sweeping away of cobwebbed practices-has proved no easy task. From simplifying the liturgy and re-examining old customs, the church has moved on to reargue fundamental issues, some of which have not been seriously debated since the post-reformation Council of Trent in 1563.

Inevitably, acceptance of change in one area of the church's activities has stirred. demands for change in other areas. An open, questioning spirit directed toward secondary problems has evolved into a radical skepticism on fundamentals. In the church as in secular society, a revolution once begun gathers momentum and force with startling rapidity.

Outsiders focus on the birth-control issue because the church's attitude on the population problem has the widest popular interest. Within the Catholic community, however, the controversy over the role of the priesthood shares attention, For the long future of the church as an institution, it is the more important question. It first became acute in tion of how priests can best serve not only their fellow Catholics but the entire human society which is racked by poverty, racism and war. In the past, most American priests have been part of an inward-looking church. devoted to the inculcation of personal virtues and to the education of the young. but gingerly in its approach to most political and social issues

Today's reformers contend that a priest's role has to be more broadly defined. Implicit in this disagreement is the further democratization of the church since priests, when engaging in social action, share responsibility with laymen but, when performing their sacerdotal functions, stand apart and are unique.

With regard to the priesthood, the church is truly in a crisis, a word which derives from the Greek word meaning "to separate." Many priests and nuns have separated themselves from their religions vocations and some have withdrawn from the church because of their convictions on these questions. Not many years ago it would have been possible for the Pope to pronounce definitively on these matters and expect to be obeyed. But papal supremacy itself is no longer accepted as by drawing a virtual map for a peace formula, trims this country to size even before negotiations start and undercuts its bargaining position.

Nevertheless, there has been some give in the Israeli position despite the fact that Washington has meticolously svoided any kind of blackmail pressures such as the threat to diminish pledged arms support. The U.S. concedes the importance of maintaining a basic military balance and a strong Istael in order to discourage overconfident Arab leaders from meeting a renewed War.

But there has been one major. shift in the U.S. view and this has reluctantly been accepted by Isrsel. In the past Washington agreed that there should be no from

This, then, is where the substance of the matter rests despite ugly shadows of propaganda that form above that substance in an effort, for varying reasons, to disguise reality. Despite the new Soviet-Egyptian pact, there is an atmosphere of more hope for progress than at any time since June, 1967, but one can't build peace on stanosphere alone.

VASHINGTON .-- On the atternoon of July 24, 1945, at the end of the day's meeting of Stalin, Churchill and Truman at Potsdam, the President walked around the circular table to tell the Soviet leader about the bomb. "I casually mentioned to Stalin." he later wrote in his memoirs, "that we had a new weapon of unusual destructive force." It had been successfully tested at Alamogordo, N.M., eight days earlier.

Stalin, recounted Mr. Truman, "showed no special interest, All he said was that he was glad to hear it and hoped we would make 'good use of it against the Japanese.'" Secretary of State James P. Byrnes later wrote that "because the Russians kept secret their developments in military weapons, they thought it improper to ask us about ours." But now we have some new evidence from the Russian side in "The Memoirs of Marshal Zhukov," published this week in the United States by Delacorte Press. Whereas the Americans were surprised at Stalin's lowkey response to news of the American secret, Zhukov's account gives a very different picture. The great Russian general writes:

"In the course of the conference, the head of the American delegation, President Tru-man, made an attempt to mount a psychological attack on Stalin with the objective of political blackmail. I do not recall the exact date but after the close of one of the formal meetings Truman informed Stalin that the United States now possessed a bomb of exceptional power, without, however, naming it the atomic pomb.

Facial Deception

"As was later written abroad. at that moment Churchill fixed his gaze on Stalin's face, closely observing his reaction. However, Stalin did not beiray his feel-ings and pretended he saw noth-ing special in what Truman had imparted to him. Both Churchill and many other Anglo-American authors subsequently assumed that Stalin had really failed to fathom the significance of what he had heard.

"In actual fact, on returning to his quarters after the meeting, Stalin, in my presence, told. Molotov about his conversation with Truman. The latter reacted mmediately: Let them. Europe, U.S., U.S.S.R.

The Atlantic conference opening in Lisbon. on June 3 will be very important for the future of Europe and of the world. The problems of a European security conference, of Berlin, and of a balanced reduction of forces in Central Europe will be dealt with in Lisbon. At the Warsaw Pact meeting in Budapest last year, Mr. Brezhnev first spoke of "a withdrawal of foreign forces." Last March 30. he called for "a balanced reduction of armed forces in Central Europe," and on May 14 in Thilisi he proposed to America a negotiation on the matter . . . Now, according to the Americans, he reportedly agrees that this discussion must be carried on independently from any other question, that ie to say, independently from tha UN disarmament conference still going on in Geneva and the four-power negotiations on Berlin. President Nixon thus does not raise any precondition for the new negotiation proposed by Brezhnev. In Lisbon, the definition of a joint position of NATO members on a "balanced reduction of forces in Europe" will be difficult to reach, since the Americans begin from the principle that such a negotiation is unrelated to the Russian-American SALT negotiation . . . Now, this viewpoint is challenged by several European members-notably by the Germansand the question will arise of the participation of the Atlantic pact allies in a subsequent phase of the SALT negotiation. The Americans wish to obtain from their Atlantic partners a common formula favorable to the new negotiation, because the Washington government appears quite determined to make the situation in Europe evolve. It considers that it needs for its world policy a broad agreement with the U.S.S.R. in this sector and, as (the left-wing Gaullist weekly) La Tribune des Nations writes, this also appears to be the opinion of the Soviets.

Egypt's Treaty

The Egyptian-Soviet "friendship treaty" just signed in Cairo . . . does no more than formalize an existing situation. Indeed, one passage-where the two signatories promise "non-interference" in each other's internal affairs can only be regarded as a plus for Sadat. Egypt is hardly likely to interfere in Russia's domestic politics. As to the general prospects for a Middle East settlement, Sadat is a peacemaker, and anything which strengthens his personal position, as this treaty does, can only help those prospects in the long run. Meanwhile, like his discomfited rivals at home, the Russians have learned how deceptive those sleepy eyes of Anwar Sadat can be.

positions along the Sues Canal until a complete peace settlement had been worked out. Now Washington wants Israel to give up its defenses on the canal; its Bar Lev positions east of the canal, and to sacrifice the intangible but most important prestige involved. There is only one substantial point where Israel still balks on the modalities of an interim settlement that would open the cansi and pull back this country's troops as a first step. This is Israel's obstinate refusal to see the Egyptian Army cross back to the East Bank as Israeli forces withdraw.

Cease-Fire Issue

The Israelis underscored this point to Rogers, saying they would agree to all proposed terms for an interim settlement - arcent the Egyptian Army's re-establishment in Sinai prior to a final peace. Moreover, they de-manded precise assurance that any cease-fire accompanying such an interim settlement would endure. The United States says it obviously cannot force Egypt to ac-cept a "permanent" cesse-fire but Israel wants a definitive pledge that there will be no deadline hanging overhead by which time the truce accompanying an interim settlement would end. In return for this, Israel is prepared to promise that the line to which Israeli troops withdrew during an interim settlement would not be a final frontier Also that the interim settlement itself would in no way be used by Israeli diplomacy to try and paralyze the Jarring talks in which Sweden's special envoy serves as a shuttle for UN peace-TOLKING. .

course, are infinitely greater. Modern man is not very good at remembering. He is obviously and naturally more interested in thinself and his own time. This is particularly true of the Americans, who have feeble memories, and this is not all bad. There is very little hatred in this country, for example, for the enemies of the last World. War, no yearning for 'revenige,' only a kind of vague wonder and a little andety about the German and Japanese peoples, whose spectacular economic . recovery now starile both Europe the world arms race is increasing steadily, which is no con-solation this Memorial Day. In 1964 the total for all nations was about $140 billion and it is now running at the stupendous rate of $204 billion .. But while there were only 20 years between the two World Wars, we are now in the 26th year since the end of the last World War, and there is some evidence that scientific discovery is not only increasing the capacity for mass destruction but also compelling nations, out of the fear of war and chaos, to cooperate in avoiding major war and economic disaster.

In many ways the noisy propaganda of the cold war has obscured the progress that has been made in the last generation in building effective world orgamination in some fields. The big nations no longer go to war over murdered archdukes or fear of economic or naval competition, and while they squabble endlessly over some issues, they still manage at the same time to cooperate on other issues.

Hopeful Trends

The United States and the Soviet Union, for example, disagree about Vietoam, Berlin and Cubs, but they accept sur-vetilance of one another's ter-ritories by satellites, and cooperate in settling disputes between nations where then vital interests are not in conflict, and. also they talk about their common problems in world communications, weather forecasting, fighting disease and pollution." keys to the culture of the Scythians, a race of North Asian barbarians who dominated the Black Sea steppes for 600 years and then vanished.

Pravda said today that the find was in a burial mound near the Ukrainian city of Ordzhonikidze, in the same region where Russian archeologists a century ago solv-ed many of the mysteries of the Scythian nomads when they opened the now famous near Chertomlyk, mound

In the Orczhonikidze tomb, believed to date from the fourth century BC, an archeological team found the remain: of a queen, a child and three servants whose execution by strangulation was required by Scythian custom when their mistress died.

Neck Ornament

On the queen's head were wellpreserved fragments of a gold conical hat and gold earrings. On her fingers were 11 gold rings and there were wide, golden bracelets on her wrists.

Pravda said that archeologists were especially interested in a gold ornament found round the neck. It was decorated with two crouched lions below a pair of unknown or imaginary animals which had not been found since the Chertomlyk digging in 1862-63.

Typical of the Scythian culture, the queen's funeral robe was decorated with gold disks decorated with the forms of animals. Among them were a griffin, a lion devouring a deer and a female figure flying on a bird.

Custom

By Scythian custom the height of the burial mound was an indication of the importance of the dead person. For example the Chertomlyk mound was 20 meters high; the newly opened mound is 9 meters.

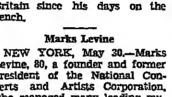

The queen and her companions seem to have been buried in an antechamber. Pravda said the excavation would now be moved "to the central chamber, where more surprises are awaited."

Mr, de Marney had played The existence of the mound had been known for some time. The authorities decided to open it because the site was threatened by the expansion of a nearby iron mine

Future Vietnam Policy

Yost Proposes A U.S. Program After Pullout

Mr. Yost was charge d'affaires at Bangkok in 1945-46, ambassador to Laos in 1954-56 and served two years in the Nixon administration as ambassador to the United Nations. Since February. he has been associated with the Columbia School of International Affairs. He wrote this orticle for The Washington Post.

By Charles W. Yost

THOSE who advocate early and most favorable outcome of the total U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam are being asked what policy the United States should adopt toward the area after withdrawal. Should the United States wash its hands of it entire ?? Should it continue military and 'or economic aid? What about Laos and Cambodia? What about Thailand?

These are fair questions and deserve the best answers we can give on the basis of the facts now known. Since opinions differ vastly about what will happen in Indochina after the Americans depart, and the United States must obviously be prepared to respond-or not to respond-to various contingencies, one way to answer the questions is to suggest responses to each of three possible scenarios. The first assumes a compromise political settlement in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia before or after U.S. departure; the second assumes rapid Communist victories; the third assumes continued war.

In the first case we would suppose that in Vietnam, after their elections in October and after the United States has announced a firm date for its withdrawal, the North and South Vietnamese governments and former "Liberation Front" agree on a neutral interim, government in the South, either one to continue in office for soma time while the country is rehabilitated or one to hold early elections. In either case no reunion with the North would be contemplated for the indefinite future.

Under these circumstances I would recommend that the United States continne, if so requested, to supply substantial economic aid to the interim or newly elected government, either directly or through international agencies as the government prefers. There would presumably be little or no need for military aid, except per-haps some spare parts and ammunition for U.S. equipment previously supplied.

war that we could realistically hope for. Much as we might desire it, it is most improbable that there could be a "Koreatype settlement" unless the North Vietnamese are decisively defeated on the field of battle, After having fought successfully against the Americans for six years, it is hardly likely that they would unless defeated, settle with the South Vietnamese for anything less than the sort of compromise outlined above. The real alternatives to such a compromise would seem to be either. after our withdrawal, a Com-munist victory or an indefinite continuation of the war between the two Vietnams.

Herald Tribune

PARIS, MONDAY, MAY 31, 1971

The worst possible case would presumably be that after our withdrawal the anti-Communist forces in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia collapse and the North Vietnamese or their clients take over completely. In that ease, there would be little or nothing the United States could or should do in Indochina, though tha Unlted States would at once have to decide with the governments of neighboring countries. particularly Thailand, what would be necessary and feasible to reinforce their security. The United States would presumably wish to offer asylum to any Vietnamese, Laos and Cambodians

Third Scenario

who might request It.

The third possible scenario after U. S. departure would be continuation of fighting hetween Vietnamese on a substantial scale-and for a substantial period. Under these circumstances, I would assume that we would feel obligated to continue to supply the South Vietnamese government with both military and economie aid sufficient to enable it continue its resistance.

Nightmarish Nights of Calcutta

By Lee Lescaze

CALCUTTA (WP) -Calcutta's poorest are the thousands of sleepers who line the sidewalks every night, bundled in rags against mosquitoes and rats. The richest in this crowded, crumbling city are like the businessman who was told recently that his wife would be given local anesthetic. His reaction was instinctive: "Oh, no," he instructed the doctor, "make sure she gets an imported one."

They number their servants hy dozens or scores, get their whiskey from bootleggers, smoke black-market American cigarettes

Communists

The Nazalities' worst enemy, next to the army and police, is the Communist party (Marxist), the largest political party in West Bengal, the state of which Calcutta is the capital. The Marxists got about 40 percent of the vote in the March election and are now in opposition to a shaky coalition state government dominated by Prime Minister Indira. Gandhi's Congress party.

Full Withdrawal

If we assume a similar scenario in Laos and Cambodia, there would be a withdrawal of all foreign forces, including North Vletnamese, and the constitution or reconstitution of coalition governments roughly reflecting the internal balance of power. U.S. aid policy would in these circumstances be the same as that proposed for Vietnam.

It would be advantageous to the peoples of the area-and to the United States-that all of Indochina, or if that were not possible at least Laos and Cam-bodia, be "neutralized." that is, that all foreign forces be excluded, that the countries be internationally gueranteed against external attack or externally inspired insurgency. that they not participate in or be protected hy any military alliance, and that arms they need be supplied by other than great powers. These arrangements could be agreed by an international Geneva-type conference or otherwise. They might or might not involve some form of international machinery. preferably under United Nations auspices, to finance rehabilitation and reconstruction. If other Southeast Asian countries desired to participate in some or all of these arrangements, they might do so.

This scenario envisages the

Rogers to Meet NATO Allies on Troops in Europe

HAMILTON, N.Y. (Reuters) .-Secretary of State William P. Rogers said Sunday that the United States and its allies will this week nian a new initiative to but to the Soviet Union on mutual troop cuts in Central Europe.

Mr. Rogera flies to Lisbon Tuesday for a ministerial conference of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

He said: "I will be consulting with colleagues in NATO on a new initiative to accelerate movement toward a mutual and balanced reduction of forces in Central Europe, now that the Soviet Union has finally responded affirmatively to NATO's longstanding proposals."

Mr. Rogers, in remarks to students graduating from Colgate University, where he studied, gave no indication of what the initiative will be.

U.S. role thereafter would be analogous to that of the Russians and the Chinese vis-a-vis the North Vietnamese. I would recommend that the United States use much more vigorously than in the past the leverage connected with its aid to press the Saigon government to negotiate, if the other side were also willing, a compromise political settlement along the lines suggested in the first scenario described above. Presumably the United States would also limit its military aid to what the South Vietnamese could use effectively and would not maintain any American military "advisers" there.

If fighting also continued in Laos, Cambodia or both, the United States chould also continne its military and economic aid to their governments along the same lines as to the Viet-Damese.

people have been killed for political reasons over the last ten months. Everyone agrees that hundreds of other killings go unreported, in large part because they happen in sections of Calcutta where the police have given up patrolling.

Widespread murders are relatively new to Calcutta, and the police themselves are one of the major targets. A year ago, one police sergeant said, the thugs only threw bricks. "Now they use pipe guns and bombs." In re-5DOZ se, the 18,600-man municipal police force has abandoned the sticks it carried for protection and now most policemen have guns.

Trapped At night, police flying squads cruise the city in vans with heavy wire grills over the windshield and windows to protect them from bombs. Even with their guns and grills, however, tha police won't go down any of the narrow lanes off Calcutta's main roads unless they take a large force. Too often, the sergeant said, a police van has found the lane barricaded and the flying squad, unable to turn around, has been trapped while terrorists threw bombs from the rooftops. Twenty-one police were killed on dnty and 345 wounded in fights with Maoist terrorists over the last nine months, according to police statistics. A year ago, when the largest of accepted settlement.

Under the scenario of continued substantial fighting after U.S. withdrawal, as well as in the worst case mentioned above, it would be in the American interest, in order to insure against a "domino effect," that the United States reaffirm its commitment to support Thailand in case of external attack and that it continue military and economic aid to that country. The United States should, however, withdraw from Thailand the air forces that were used in the Indochina war and limit U.S. military presence to a small number of advisers.

If an international conference were held under any of the above scenarios and agreement could be reached there to neutralize Indochina, an effort might be made to extend that neutralization to the whole or larger part of Southeast Asia. If that were successful, the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization could be dissolved.

has grown ever since. Calcutta's Nazalites are a curious revolutionary party, embracing Mao Tse-tung as their leader and formally calling themselves the Communist party (Marxist-Leninist). In addition to having a non-Indian sourcine leader, the Naxalites believe in a non-Indian theory-that almost random acts of violence will break down law and order, then the government and pave the way for a general uprising of the masses

It is generally believed that Calcutta's most brilliant university students join the Naxalites. but this may be myth and exactly who leads the movement is unclear. In any case the leaders, the ideologues, do not do their own killings.

Instead, thugs who have been in trouble with the police find themselves taken under the wing of the Nazalite party. In exchange for a moderate allowance, protection from the police, bail when they are arrested and the security of belonging to an organization, these thugs' commit munder and bombings on instruction.

Nazalites and their thugs spend a lot of time fighting among themselves. In two years they have managed to split into an estimated 15 factions and they save many of their best bombs for the latest heretic within their movement.

Former Police Commissioner Gupta believes the Nazalites have passed their high-water mark. There has been real cleavage between the student ideologue and the urban anti-social guerrilla. he said. "Most students have become horrifled by the terror tactics and now they are looking for another political path.

"The police can shoot anybody. There is no defense in court." Mr. Dasgupta claims that 250 of his party workers were murdered by police in the last year. He is bitter that his party was not asked to form the new state government and pledges that despite police and army efforts there will be mass demonstrations against the Congress-led coalition government.

The Marxists follow neither For years, planners talked of Peking nor Noscow and their modest headquarters on a narrow street is decorated with the portraits of only two Communist -Lenin and Ho Cht Minh. Most Nazalities started in the Marxist party and broke away when they despaired of the parliamentary road to power. Calcutta's violence and enormous gap between rich and poor dominate any picture of the eity. On the Royal Calcutta golf course recently a foursome watch-ed three men chase another across the fairways. When the golfers came to the sixth hole they met the three coming back and found the other man murdered. At the Tollygunge Club, bombs were thrown over the fence, narrowly missing the horses running in the third race. "What a life," a European remarked.

Calcutta also has many of the virtues of a great city. It is probably India's most important center of painting, music and theater. There is andless good conversation about literature and art as well as politics, and Calcuttans prida themselves on being more intellectual than other ical violence and the rich Bengali cultural life are the desperately poor and the desperately inadequate public facilities of Calcutta which make this city a grim warning to other nations that would let their cities decay. More than three-fourths of Calcutta is without running water or sewers. When the monsoon rains come each year, large portions of Calcutta flood because there is no drainage. For more than two months last year, eastern Calcutta was under several feet of water. Those drainage and water pipes that exist are aged and likely to give ont soon. After a rain raises the water table, muddy water soaks through the porous water pipes and all taps give out for as long as 100 years. Most Bustee residents moved into Calcutta in the late 19th century when it was the capital of British India and the British needed labor to build the city and the huge port. They have never gone back to the countryside, but they have a highly developed "village" structure within each Bustee. The biggest of Calcutta's Bustees has about 50,000 people, but the average size is between 5,000 and 10,000.

rebuilding tha Bustee areas, which have a few brick huts bnt are mostly mud shacks similar to those in the Bengal countryside. However, they realized ten years ago that India would never ba rich enough for such a major renewal operation and sights were lowered to a modest Bustee improvement program that will bring water taps and sanitary tollets into the Bustees. The goal is one tap for every 50 people and one sanitary tollet for every 25.

$1.25 a Month

In most Bustees, the shacks are owned by landlords who live in hetter parts of the city. Rents run between $1.25 and $1.80 a month for one room in a hut of five or six small rooms. Getting contractors to bid on Bustee improvement jobs is sometimes difficult because of the violent reputations of certain areas. The Nazalites use. Bustees as sanctuaries from the polica who never patrol them. but they generally have not tried to politicize the slum residents. Most Bustess are clustered around a stagnant pool of water called a tank in which the people bathe, defecate, wash their clothes and scrape their dishes. The cows, which are omnipresent in Calcutta, also use the tanks. In 1959 the World Health Organization rushed into Calcutta because the city was thought to be a major seat of choiera, But disease has not been a major problem.

Why haven't there been cerious epidemics, one official was asked. "I'm damned if I know," he replied.

Until the 1970-71 fiscal year which ended March 31 here, capital investment in urban improvement was nathelically low Bnt from an average of a Ettle over $3 million annually, with the founding of the Calcutta Metropolitan Development Authority last year, $21 million was budseted. Yet, although all predictions of imminent disaster have been unfulfilled, a majority of people here are still ready to bef there will be a massive, violent and largely uncontrolled uprising in Calcutta before there are meaningful municipal improvements.

ney, seeming to overlook the oft-stated Soviet proposal for the end to military blocs, affirmed again and again the need to fortify the unity of the Soviet bloc. He justified the Soviet-led invasion of 1968 as necessary to prevent Czechoslovakia from going capitalist. He had only scorn for liberals and other intellectuals who tend to influence public opinion in the very West European countries that Moscow is trying to court.

The Zigzag Policy

Nobody will ever be successful in taking Czechoslovakia out of the eocialist camp." he said. "Nobody will ever be successful in breaking our friendship and fraternity." Delegates to the 14th Congress of the Czechoslovak Communist party gave him a etanding ovation.

In short, the Russians were practicing what they themselves describe as "a zigzag policy." Formally, dipiomats link the current moves to the decisions of the 24th party Congress which promdétente to the West but ised revolution to the rest of the dividual tax benefits scheduled to take place next year. Moving these forward to 1971 would inject some $4.5 billion in additional spending power into the public's hands.

But none of the available steps in the fiscal and monetary areas may be necessary if patience is exercised. By the fourth quarter, the economy, which last November emerged from what has now been officially labeled a recession by the National Bureau of Economic Research, should be throbbing strongly, and 1972 should be an exuberant business year.

That underlying belief has propped the stock market in the recent spate of profit-taking and iovestor uncertainty, which might take a while to run its course.

Repeat Performanco

The market's performance last week was virtually a duplicate of its movement the week before, with early weakness and nervousness followed by stability in generally cautious trading. The market was down about 14 points for the week in the Dow-Jones industrial average, widening its loss over the last mooth to some 43 points, or 4 1.2 percent. It is now positioned at 907.81. While the stock market was turning downward sgain in a continuation of its consolidating phase, the bond market reversed its recent course. Prices rose and new issues of various bonds were marketed successfully at yields a bit below the peaks reached earlier in the month.

A high-grade utility issue. for example, was offered last Wed-nesday at a yield of 8.16 percent. down significantly from the 6.32 percent return on a similar bond in the preceding week. Government bond prices rose every day through Thursday, and the Bond Buyer index of tax-exempt yields ensed teo-bundredths of a per-centage point to 5.66, its first decline since mid-March.

Has a new trend started in the bond market after the 3 12-month climb in rates? It is really too early to tell: last week's move was strictly technical. The credit markets, instead of responding to economic news, sppeared to be influeoced by a shift of attltude by traders and investors. Yields above 8 percent on high-grade corporate issues were quite attractive to investors, while traders, worried that a decline that had already lasted several mootbs could not go on forever, declded to cover their short positions.

There were also two DM issues announced before the freeze and they will go on as scheduled. Comalco Investments Europe, a subsidiary of the Australian aluminum producer, will raise 50 million DM in a 7 3/4 percent, 15-year issue, whose average life will be 10 1/2 years.

Saab-Scanla of Sweden will float a 75 million DM issue with the same expected terms.

Still on offer are the $20 million convertible from Intercontinental Hotels, a Pan American Airways subsidiary, and the Sooth count offer.

South's choice of hearts for his opening bid served to locate the heart fit for North-South, which might have been lost altogether if South had opened one dia-mond and West had overcalled in Against four hearts, West began by taking two spade tricks. He then judged well by leading a third spade, a play that was un-likely to hurt the defense.

South could be assumed to have the diamond ace as part of his opening bid, so a diamond trick would not disappear. And the spade play could not give a ruff-dummy and had to guess the trump situation. As West had overcalled, there was some reason to think that he would have fewer trumps than his partner. Accordingly, South entered his hand with a club lead to the queen and played a small trump.

This was the best he could do, and it worked up to a point. West did have the doubleton heart honor, as South boped, but he rose to the occasion nobly. West put up the heart king and played a fourth spade. The ruff-and-discard did not matter. What mattered was that East was sure of making the setting trick in trumps.

If dummy ruffed, he could discard, preserving the queen, nine as a natural trump trick. And if dummy did not ruff, East could ruff with the nine, forcing South's ace and establishing the queen as a trick.

THE PRISONER OF SEX By Norman Mailer. Little Brown. 240 pages. 4.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

TT is just as easy to ridicule Norman Maller as it is to admire him. In his unselfconscious way, he advises us to do both: it is good advice. He is at once nore primitive and more sophisticated than most writers, and the reader has to keep this in mind. Even in print, he is usually speaking off the record, confiding half-formed feelings that should not be taken too literally, but insted, so to speak. The beginnings of his books-when he is clearing his throat of his ego. -are likely to put readers off. He seems to be daring us to misunderstand or underestimate him. "The Prisoner of Sex" is no ex-ception. It begins as if Mailer had just woke up from a night of disastrous drinking and stag-gered over to his desk to surable blindly among his papers, muttering "where am I?"

The book was originally conceived as a reply to Kate Millett's blistering attack on Mailer in her "Sexual Politics," but as he points out, all the themes of his life had gathered here: revolution, tradition, sex, the family, the child, the shape of the future, technology, the ethics of the critic, the male mystique and the rights of minorities. After some introductory maundering, Mailer. turns to an examination of the male's alleged emotional callous-ness. Not true, he says, men are delicate, too; the roles are equally difficult. A man's sexual force is not luck, but "his finest moral product ... an adventurous juncture of ego and courage."

is that the revolution of reason and technology is a form of scientific vanity that threatens our naturalness. Though this is not new, it cannot be said too often: Mailer is worried here about the "technologizing of sex," which reduces it to the mere currency of power-who is adored by whom. His often-cited dislike of contraception is rooted in the notion that conception keeps sax serious. insures it against becoming a casual transaction. And while, there are obvious objections to this, there are equally obvious objections to the stripping of all consequences and all "mystery" from the sexual act.

Mailer feels-and Germaine Greer agrees with him in "The Female Eunuch,"-that the new emphasis on clitoral organn is a push-button spproach to sex. What has happened, he asks, to Blake's most lovely idea that "embraces are cominglings from the head to the feet" In this same passage, Mailer offers such a good description of the possible range of female response that one wonders why, in his novels, women are not given greater opportunities to enjoy them. When Mailer turns to Miss Millett's attack on Henry Miller, it quickly becomes clear that she is only half right. While it is true that Miller depensonalized women, it is also true that she Villanova's 11th outdoor championship in the last 15 years came with only one gold medal, Marty Liquori's 4:00.4 mile. Last year the Wildcats captured seven of the 20 events. As many as five schools, Villanora, Maryland, Pittsburgh, Penn State and Adelphi, were in contention for the team trophy late into today's program. Penn State had the lead with 13 points siter Friday's events.

But, as so often happens in such fiercely contested competi-tion, quirks of fate decided the outcome.

Villanova received surprising point performances from Les Nagy, a freshman, in the threemile and Davey Wright in the steeplechase and a career best quarter-mile from Liquori in the mile relay.

Magy wound up third in the three-mile after the Wildcats had tried unsuccessfully to substitute John Rartnett in his place. Harinett had run a strong third in the six-mile Friday while Nagy slipped back to eighth.

Notes From the Colorado Underground

By Ken Hoskins HESPERUS, Colo., (AP1,-Irvin and Violet Smith courted in a mine. They reared five children in a mine.

Nearly 50 years later, the spry pick and shovel team is still taking tons of coal from a 1.000-foot shaft here in Hay Guich. But new federal mine regulations may soon end their lifelong love affair with the dark world underground.

"Six days is all I ever knew him and we got married," said Mrs. Smith, whose dark brown hair and firm grip hide her 55 years. "But before we were married. I went with him 3,000 feet underground in an Arizona mine. I liked it. It just fascinated me." Over the next few years the Smiths moved from Arizona to Colorado to New Mexico and back to Colorado, where, Mrs. Smith said, "I swore I'd never leave." They were traveling from mine to mine.

"One thing we never did," she said, "was jeave our children." So, when the babies began arriving, they too went into the mines We'd take these children and go into the mine at night and work until we were played out," she said. "We had our kids bedded down in a coal car."

When the Smiths came here to Hay Gulch 36 years ago, coal mining for them was still just a husband-wife venture. But now, most of the mining is mechanized and four hired men work the face of the mine. The changes also have brought tighter federal control of the industry, including new regulations under the Coal Mine Health and Safety Act of 1969,

They include requirements for gas and dust monitoring equipment and new facilities, such as a toilet down in the mine. The Smiths view the changes as a government attempt to drive out the little man and they've reacted; stroogly. "I run me an inspector off this morning," she said. "I said, 'Get your goddamned self out of here," "

The inspector, from the U.S. Bureau of Mines, wasn't the first to be dispatched by the 6-foot, 180-pound female miner. Last November, when one ordered the mine shut down, Mrs. Smith hauled him from his car, and, as she put it. "give him a few."

The Smiths' major complaint has been that fines have been issued for failure to install equipment which they say can't be purchased.

"Ive had my order in at two places for the methane gas monitor and I still can't get it," she said. "I have been in compliance with everything up to the point where you cooldn't buy it. If you can't buy it, you still get fined."

Anthony Moschetti, district manager for the Bureau of Mines in Denver, confirmed that an inspector had been roughed up by Mrs. Smith and that the Smiths had been cited for not having a methane monitor and several other pieces of safety equipment. "I would say now they're still not in conformity, but are cooperating." Mr. Moschetti said. "That's a lot better anyway."

Irvin Smith, 70 and a good fire inches shorter than Mrs. Smith, made it clear he has no intention of letting federal regulations and inspectors tie up his operation or his way of life.

"We're obligated to a hell of a lot of people for beat," he said, noting that of 17 coal mines located in Hay Gulch 36 years ago, their mine is the only one still operating., Mr. Smith also noted that the four men who work the mine face would have to go on welfare if the mine closed.

"Id rather be down in here than out there," said his wife, stooped over, looking out of the shaft to a ray of sunlight at the entrance. "We do our work of our own good free will. It's good to work like this, you know,

So far, the Smiths have been able to keep the mine open, running off inspectors and ignoring orders to close. Mr. Smith intends to keep it up.

"I could sit down on my duff and draw an old-age pension," he added, "but I ain't gonna do it. I'm goin' to stay right here and dig coal."

PEOPLE:

Actor and song-and-dance man Denald O'Conner stirred up a lot of ire in Ireland and went into hiding over the weekend,

The 45-year-old American, who rose in show business as a child star in such Irishy films as "The Merry Monahans" and "Patrick the Great," first was jeered off the Trinity College campus when he arrived to film a TV documentary, "Donald's Dublin." Angry students charged that the TV show would partray the Irish Republic as a land of teprechauns -the "little people" of magical powers in Irish folklore.

Later, he and his TV crew and four lauge trucks and thousands of yards of electric cable arrived in the city's Moore Street, the major shopping thoroughtare, to film his epic. Shopkeepers and stall traders hounded him and his crew, into a retreat.

The trate Irishers said they might as well shut up shop if the actor and his aides stayed that day, which was Friday, the busiest day of their week. "This has happened before, and business people lost thousands of pounds," one merchant leader said.

O'Connor was speechless, officially, in his hideout, but his manager, Harry Storey, complained: "We have been all over Europe and we have never had these problems. Obviously, somebody had it in for us."

The day after his losing battle of Moore Street, the entertainer tried again. He and his crew went to the waterfront of "Donald's Dublin" but couldn't work because their power cables had been chopped by an ax. Manager Storey managed one last commentary: "If the cables had been connected when they were cut, it would have been disastrous for the person involved."

Not all Irish folk may believe. in the leprechauns, but there's this news item from AP to show they still have a superstitious iand kindly) streak:
